FLAGS.

THE green flag waved over the city hall on St. Patrick's day. That was right. Several Irishmen, not to mention Phil Sheridan, fought for our flag, and had a right to exhibit their own. Various Germans, including Sigel, fought for the stars and stripes, and the colors of the fatherland belong here as well as there. If there is any adopted citizen who doesn't believe in our emblem above his own he had better go home; but the United States government is big enough to permit the courtesy of recognition to every decent banner under the sun, and it is churlishness and small business to deny it.

A DEBT OF GRATITUDE.

THIS GOVERNMENT ought to send the body of John Ericsson to Sweden and erect over his remains a monument suited to his fame. The fight of the Merrimac and Monitor was the grandest event in naval history. This man made the Merrimac, and then made the Monitor to beat it. The latter saved the war for the Union, for there wasn't a northerner of intelligence who didn't believe that the first iron-clad had it in its power to destroy every city along the coast. Until the Monitor was made—and the late John A. Griswold, an uncrowned governor of the state of New York, bore the larger part of the expense of it—there was not a man of business in the north who didn't feel that his personal property as well as the Union was in extreme peril. Let anybody read of the Merrimac-Monitor fight in Hampton Roads, if he doesn't happen to remember it, and see what a splendid thing it would be for this government to honor the career of John Ericsson and bury his remains in accordance with his wish.

PROTECTION FOR THE VOTER.

THE wisdom of legislation is exhausting itself in tinkering. Courts seem to be established to re-adjust the legal crazy-quilt, and shape as far as possible the puzzling patchwork into some semblance of equity. Human nature cannot be changed by enactment any more than piety can be injected by the resolution of a church consistory. The chief and effective good of law is to deter crime by punishment and make dishonesty, corruption and trickery troublesome and expensive. Evil exists, and will exercise itself. It is a hard but true statement that by surrounding crime and wrong-doing with obstacles a conventional, at least, if not true honesty can be stimulated.

The electoral reform bill now before our legislature and many of the legislatures of New England and western states is in the direction of making cheating possible, and offers to men who have agreed to vote in one direction a secret chance, beyond detection, to give the lie to their promise.

The Saxton bill in this state is the same in substance as that offered in other states, and proposes that—

The ballots shall be prepared at the public expense.

The nominees' names for each office are to be printed under the heading of the political party they represent.

The ballots must be official, and no other shall be valid.

An additional security against intimidation, purchase or persuasion is provided by each voter selecting on this general ticket the name of the person and nominee of the party he prefers by putting a mark opposite the name.

The voter must do this in a place provided, and alone, no other person being with or allowed to assist him.

This plan is not new. It has been tested successfully for many years in Australia, England, Belgium and Canada, and in Louisville, Ky., in city elections.

The plan possesses these advantages. Printing and distributing the ballots at the county expense allows the selection of candidates for public office who, however competent, might be deterred from accepting a nomi-

THE PAPERS that put Mr. Blaine in the attitude of the man with a chip on his shoulder are acting foolishly. Mr. Blaine has reached years of discretion and wants nothing but peace, merely asking that it come without dishonor.

A TYRANT OF INJUSTICE.

OF COURSE, Lawyer Kerr could not have been found guilty. He simply served his client. If he had shown his client how to pick a lock and blow up a safe, and had had half the proceeds of the burglary, that would have been his legitimate pay for services rendered. A lawyer can do nothing which does not carry with it immunity of punishment. A lawyer is a privileged being. A criminal lawyer may live on the proceeds of robbery and murder; but the bar says, and the bench indorses the verdict, that in thus serving his clients he is doing his exact duty. Is there anything more unjust than the law? Has this country, now that the state has been liberated from the church, any greater tyrant than the law? Are not the bench and the bar the latter-day priests of the general public? Think of those men in state-prison who couldn't have been guilty without being bribed, yet whose bribers are acquitted of all wrong-doing!

AT THE OPERA.

HE curtain rose, Faust sang his invocation,
And swift as mounting flame Mephisto came—
A courtly prince, whom no consideration
Could tempt to linger when one called his name.

No arch-fiend he, of manners diabolic,
Glances like lightning terrible and fleet,
Nor yet with satyr smiles upon the frolic
He meant to have with Faust and Marguerite.

Not even was he masked in saintly brightness,

With brows whereon angelic beauty sat;
He simply seemed a man of great politeness,
Well-featured, small of height and very fat.

A jovial smile about his moustache fluttered
And twinkled in the corners of his eyes;
Each bar he deeply sang, each note he uttered,
Sounded like throttled laughter in disguise.

His menace had a mirthful implication,
His scowl was more than offset by his wink.
He seemed enjoying his enforced vacation
From torrid duties on dark Tophet's brink.

The fatty tissue of this priest infernal
Upon the audience acted like a charm;
(So plumpness ever works on minds eternal.)
And everyone agreed he meant no harm!

The house so melted to this phase of devil—
This round and merry soul to smiles decreed—
It fell at last, in kind accord with evil,
And hoped Mephisto's plans would all succeed.

nation by the large and usual assessments for printing that are so frequently made a cover for compensation to political managers. The secrecy of personal selection would hinder bribery or its attempting. The uncertainty of an agreement being carried out would make the hazard of wasted compensation too great, as the man who would sell his promise is not unlikely to lie.

This method furthermore opens an opportunity to elude the bondage of party and express by vote a political preference that, without such seclusion of selection, might be open to various forms of intimidation. The proposition is in the line of practical reform, by making all promises undetectable and uncertain. In the low moral line of political evolution it is worth the test of further experiment. The next step, however, should be and must be an educational qualification. It is likely that a large mass of our sovereigns would be driven to learn to read before being able to select a nominee of the political opinions they desire to indorse. Without a higher qualification than now held there will be added to universal suffrage the ignorant and unguarded suffrage of a selection largely by chance.

The writer overheard a voter at the polls offering as an argument to his companion, "Whenever you find a man who has something vote a certain way; it is safe for us to vote the other." This could not be called intellectual discrimination, yet was it not a bubble breaking to the surface, evolved of sewage of ignorance and envy, and of that spirit of communism that exists more widely than we know?

THE APPRECIATIVE WIDOWER.

THE monnyment's up, and it's offen my mind,
As hantsome a stone as you'll commonly find;
What an ornymnt 'tis to the burial lot!
But Becky deserved one—as good as she's got.

I can't help a-wishin' that Becky could see
It, standin' above her, as tall as a tree;
Fer sometimes she us't, when a-livin', to err,
Consatin' I didn't appreciate her.

An' yit, I don't think 'twould 'ave entered her head,
If 'twan't fer some things that her family said;
But all of her folks was unfriendly to work
And meddled with Becky to git her to shirk.

An' so it ain't strange 'at she sometimes 'ud say
Some things, in a fretful and womanish way,
That life it wa'n't nothin' but workin' to save,
An' woman wa'n't nothin' but only a slave.

They's one thing I'm glad of that is, as a rule,
I never sassed back, but kep' quiet an' cool;
I know'd she'd git over it after a spell
An' sense that I used her uncommonly well.

Fer alwuz I give her what money she earned
From chickens she raised or from butter she churned,
An' urged an' advised her to lay it away
In case of bad luck or a fewcher wet day.

An', anxious she shouldn't be caught by the banks
That fail, without leavin' you even their thanks,
I took what she got, jest as fast as it come,
An' give her my personal note fer the sum.

I paid her the int'res', as all her folks knows,
Fer housekeepin' things, an' to keep her in clo'es,
An' told her how rich she wuz gittin' to be
By havin' a forehanded husbun' like me.

WASTED ENERGY.

MRS. WALBRICK—"Fo' de lan's saik! who done dat?"
MR. WALBRICK—"I wuz 'temptin' t' carbe dat tuckey whad dem Twiggs folks sent in, an' I done swatted him too hard!"

A ROOF COMEDY.

MR. PLEGRASS—"There's that blamed cat that's been killing all my pigeons. Guess I'll make a sieve of her!"

An' so I encouraged an' helped her along,
An' pullin' together we pulled puty strong,
An' prospered unusual in all that we tried
Exceptin' the children that, most of 'em, died.

What Becky'd a-done I am sure I don't know
If 'twan't fer her workin'—she grieved fer 'em so;
An' knowin' their weak constitutions, of course,
Wuz owin' to her, must a-made her feel worse.

When Becky wuz married I wouldn't a-dreamed
She wa'n't jest as strong as she alwuz had seemed,
Or that she would be—as the preacher 'ud say—
In the midst of her usefulness taken away.

But sense she is dead I have done what I could
To show how I mourn fer a creacher so good;
An' most of the money she labored to save
I've spent fer a stone to the head of her grav.

There ain't any hantsomer nowheres around;
It shows from all parts of the berryin' ground.
They's some would a-thought that a cheaper 'ud do,
But when I am gone it'll answer fer two.

I can't help a-wishin' that Becky could see
It, standin' above her, as tall as a tree,
Fer sometimes she us't, when a livin', to err,
Consatin' I didn't appreciate her.

MR. HERRERBY—"By jimminetty! I didn't know it was blowin' so up here!"

A FABLE FOR YOUNG WRITERS.

WIT AND HUMOR once had a quarrel. "I," said Wit, "am the lightning of the mind that clears the mental atmosphere from the heaviness of literary stupidity."

"And I," said Humor, "am the genial shower that refreshes the arid plains of literary commonplaceness."

"I," said Wit, "puncture the follies of mankind with the keen arrow of ridicule. In this way I make men absurd to their fellows; they dread their neighbors' laughter, and growing ashamed of their foibles they cast them aside. I it was to whom Solomon referred as the friend when he said, 'Faithful are the wounds of a friend, but the kisses of an enemy are deceitful.'"

"But," answered the more gentle Humor, "may not a friend kiss as well as an enemy? Must a friend always wound to be faithful? 'Tis true you have corrected many a folly of mankind, but have not I also? In your path lie kindness, stabbed by your scornful words; self-esteem, dragged from its rightful throne by brutal caricature, your slave; good-nature, stung to the quick by your jibes at its 'stupidity.'"

"And you," replied Wit, the proud—"are there no ghosts in your house? Have not men—your disciples—betrayed the secrets of each other's domestic altars in the name of 'Humor'? Have not men—your disciples—stolen my sharpest arrows, blunted them against the mill-stone of verbosity, and, shooting them from their 'amusing' bow instead of my 'instructive' one, to which they rightfully belonged, sent them abroad as their own? You make men laugh, you say, and that men can enjoy your companionship longer than they can mine, and come away refreshed from the fount of fun. Give me the quick, appreciative smile of the cultivated man rather than the loud, and often senseless, laugh of the uncultured boor."

At this moment Public Opinion appeared, and Wit and Humor each appealed to her to settle the dispute.

"Alas!" said she; "by what dire mishap did I happen on the scene at this moment?"

"Ah!" spoke up Wit, the quick, "that word, mishap. It was originally a compound from misery and happiness, signifying something between the two. As you are to decide between us, and can only decide in favor of me—of one of us—you are a living illustration of its meaning."

Humor was laughing heartily and said, "That gives me some good ideas. I can have a first-rate article in answer to your question in an hour or two, when you are ready to decide."

Public Opinion clapped her hands in delight at these two characteristic replies.

"You shall have my answer at once, and it shall be both for and against each of you. You, Humor, in this present day of many followers—some of whom do, indeed, follow so far away as to be unrecognizable—you, Humor, are too often labored and heavy, and the work done in your service is too apparent. Teach your would-be disciples that 'the greatest of all arts is to conceal art,' and quicken your jests by the methods of Wit. A smile from the mind is better than a laugh from the mouth.

"And to you, Wit, whose true disciples are daily decreasing, to you I would say, be not so arrogant in your pride of past memories. The days of Hook and Hood are no more, and that which was spontaneity in their work is too apt to be imitativeness in the work of your present followers. And the sharpness of an old arrow pointed anew is less pleasing to the sight and more wounding when 'tis used. Blend the wider-reaching system of Humor with your own acuteness. Follow my advice, both of you, and each will be the gainer thereby."

And as Public Opinion left them, around and about a multitude of newspaper readers cried out aloud:

"Yea, verily; let thy touch be lighter, oh, Humor, in the alleged humorous articles, and let not thy arrows sting so sharply, oh, Wit, in the political satires."

THE ELOPEMENT.

I WILL tell you a tale of the long ago,
Ga-roo, little Annie, ga-roo;
Of a lord, a lady, a sequel of woe,
And I know that I tell you true.

One winter night, though they knew 'twan't right,
Ga-roo, little Annie, ga-roo;
They agreed to elope 'cause her pa said "nope"
When the lord for her hand did sue.

She dressed her warm, for it threatened a storm,
Ga-roo, little Annie, ga-roo;
Then down the slope they crept, and a rope
Over the wall he threw.

He said, "I'll ne'er stop till I reach the top,"
Ga-roo, little Annie, ga-roo;
"Pray fasten it tight, and cling with your might,
When I lower the rope to you."

Then his lordship lank gave a terrible yank,
Ga-roo, little Annie, ga-roo;
And her skeleton thin flew out of her skin!
Every word that I tell you is true—Ga-roo.

HER LOVERS.

"CAN I remember them, dear? Why, yes;
First my cousin, tall, handsome Paul,
A heart brimmed over with tenderness;
I liked him thoroughly—that was all.
His brother was fond of me too, you know;
One's grown-up cousin is always so!
Of boys at the college—well, let me see—
Wright, and Marcy, and Harry King;
Nothing serious there for me;
Notes and bouquets—that sort of thing.
Then came Lawrence; when he proposed,
Of course, that page of my book was closed."
"But which did you love, of the crowd all told?"
She blushed a little. "My dear," she said,
"The man I loved, he was plain and old,
Our Greek professor—long, long since dead."
A silvery tear on her eyelash gleamed:
"That was the dream my young heart dreamed."

NATURE.

HOW sweet, how charming can fair nature be
When sought in her haunts; how bright and free
Beside the babbling waters of the woodland brook,
Within the shelter of a forest nook,
Where all her charms in beauty are displayed;
Who would not woo fair nature?—winsome maid!
Ah me! if I could be that suitor blest
To lie in peace and joy upon her breast!

But yet, how fickle can the goddess be!
Like mortal maiden full of caprice, she,
Seeming to yield at times to your caress
And with sweet smiles and words your life to bless,
Then fills again your heart with doubts and fears
By mournful sigh or bitter rain of tears;
And thinking o'er the thing again I feel
I like the mortal better—she is real.

MEN WE HAVE MET.

JOSEPH A. SHAKSPEARE, MAYOR OF NEW ORLEANS.

IT may be an open question as to who wrote those pretty little skits entitled "Macbeth," "King Lear" and "Richard Triple-Junior," which have for several years stimulated the historians to go out in the country and walk back, but there is not the slightest doubt as to the authorship of "City ordinances of New Orleans, La.," to regulate and govern the cock-fighting industry. Joseph A. Shakspeare is the admirable culprit, and he was elected mayor of the city twice in succession, completely downing the Democratic nominee on each occasion. Born in New Orleans in 1837, to a father who was one of the old-time foundrymen, his early character was carefully moulded, and after being cooled and the burrs filed down, he was sent to New York to complete his ironical education with the Novelty works. He stayed with this corporation for two years, and on his return to the south was made a partner in the firm of Wheeler, Geddes & Co. in recognition of his ability as an engineer and his coining of the new phrase, "Crescent city," to take the place of the old "Mud-bend" of his boyhood. Mr. Shakspeare is a man of some eccentricities, but they are invariably in the direction of fairness and squareness. It has never been whispered of him that he used fence-rails in the construction of an iron assembly ceiling, nor that he was guilty of using cider vinegar in pickling his castings. The peculiar social conditions of his city upset the puritanical tenet that a gambler is a bad man, and his honor has had to admit that he is not enough of an Eads to jetty the flood that pours through the sluiceways of the temples-of-chance in his borough; but, as a salve to the municipal conscience, he diverted the sum which was yearly paid to the police as hush money into a fund for the erection and maintenance of an asylum for the poor, and a man may know now, when he coppers the red in New Orleans, that he is assisting a Creole pauper to a moderately square meal. As his portrait shows, Mr. Shakspeare is a man of rugged and steadfast character. He was never known to drug a fowl or split a lottery-ticket. His administration of city affairs has ever been clean and above-board; and it may never be said that the Republican nomination for mayor of New Orleans is "not for Joe."

You have a perfect goddess in your wife, sir."

"That may be," replied Hobson, who was the recipient of this burst of taffy, "but she ain't a goddess of liberty by a large majority."

"Doesn't she allow you proper latitude?" was the query.

"Not much she doesn't," with a long-drawn sigh. "See this dust, and smell this camphor? I've just passed four hours in an old hair-trunk up in the attic for saying before her that I thought Mrs. Hunchley was a charming woman. Better be careful, my friend."

"SWEET HOME."

* "There is no place like home" runs the old song, and we know how true it is.

The impressions made in the home are lasting. A mother's words never pass from the mind. A father's counsel remains fresh so long as life lasts. The last benediction of parental love and solicitude—with what tenacity it clings to the memory when almost all else has gone.

How important, therefore, that the home be maintained intact as long as possible—a haven of loving counsel, of peace and joy to the growing children. How sad when death invades, when the fire goes out on the hearthstone and the family is scattered. What the children lose by the death of a parent only those realize who have grown up without that love and advice which a parent alone can bestow.

There are tens of thousands of parents to-day in agony of mind through fear of death from kidney disease, who do not know they are doctoring only symptoms—such as wakefulness, nervousness, a splendid feeling one day and an all-gone one another, dropsy, weak heart action, pneumonia, neuralgia, fickle appetite, etc., while the real trouble is poisoned blood caused by diseased kidneys. Unless purified with Warner's Safe Cure they will just as surely die as though poisoned with arsenic.

Doctors publicly admit that they cannot cure advanced kidney disease; they are too bigoted to use Warner's Safe Cure because it is an advertised remedy; consequently, unless you use your own good judgment, secure and use Warner's Safe Cure, a specific which has proved itself in tens of thousands of cases to be all it is represented, your home, through your death, will be broken up and your loved ones deprived of that which money cannot purchase or friends supply.

A Berks county farmer has been made to believe that his orchard will be leveled in order to cut off the cider supply, in case the prohibitory amendment becomes a law. The anti-prohibitionist who "cramped" the credulous granger forgot to tell him that he would also be prevented from raising wheat and corn, in order to guard against the cereals being converted into whisky.—Norristown Herald.

THE KODAK.

PRICE $25.00.

ANYBODY can use the KODAK. The operation of making a picture consists simply of pressing a button. One Hundred instantaneous pictures are made without re-loading. No dark room or chemicals necessary. A division of labor is offered, whereby all the work of finishing the pictures is done at the factory, where the camera can be sent to be re-loaded. The operator need not learn anything about photography. He can "press the button"—we do the rest.

SHREWD ADVERTISERS.

Readers of the newspapers of the day cannot fail to be impressed with the fact that the modern advertiser is progressive.

The value of printers' ink judiciously employed cannot be over-estimated; it is the medium whereby a meritorious discovery is raised from local fame to a position in the public esteem. Hence the columns of the newspapers are daily used by hosts of advertisers and in the competition which is indulged in to attain the desired end, the reader is oftentimes amused.

The greatest of American advertisers, and it may as well be said in the world, is H. H. Warner of Rochester, N. Y., whose name has been made everywhere familiar in connection with Warner's Safe Cure, widely advertised because of its merit in the prevention and cure of kidney diseases.

By printers' ink this great discovery has achieved world-wide popularity and thousands feel grateful for the knowledge thus acquired of this greatest of modern remedies.

Furthermore, the public has been taught that disorders of the lungs, brain, heart and liver which have hitherto been regarded and treated by the profession as distinctive diseases are not so in fact, but are the attending symptoms of disease of the kidneys; therefore, the consumptive, the apoplectic, the paralytic, and the sufferer from nervous disorders can be restored to health by Warner's Safe Cure, which will remove the true cause by restoring the kidneys to healthy action.

The advertising methods employed by this greatest of advertisers are invariably instructive and, although the reader may sometimes be "caught" in reading an advertisement, which was not at first supposed to be such, there is nevertheless no time lost since useful information is invariably gained concerning life's great problem.

Jiggers—"Darn an ignoramus, anyhow!"

Jiggers—"I was calling on little Miss Perty last night and she asked what the phrase 'indulging in osculatory exercises' meant. Said she found it in a novel."

Jiggers—"I didn't know what it meant until I looked through the dictionary this morning."—Terre Haute Express.

SUFFERERS FROM WEAK SPINE.

Persons suffering from weak back will take comfort in reading the following letter from Mr. A. W. Barrett, of Oswego, N. Y.:

"Ten years ago I was afflicted with a lame back. The pain was so severe that I could hardly walk or get about. Hearing much said about ALLCOCK'S POROUS PLASTERS, I applied two to the lower part of my spine. In a week I was very much better. I put on fresh plasters at the end of ten days, and two weeks afterward found myself entirely well. If I get a very severe cold, I sometimes have a return of this weakness of the spine, but ALLCOCK'S PLASTERS cure me in three or four days."

Beware of imitations, and do not be deceived by misrepresentation. Ask for ALLCOCK'S, and let no explanation or solicitation induce you to accept a substitute.

JAPANESE LULLABY.

Sleep, little pigeon, and fold your wings—
 Little blue pigeon with velvet eyes;
 Sleep to the singing of mother-bird swinging,
 Swinging the nest where her little one lies.

Away out yonder I see a star—
 Silvery star with a tinkling song;
 To the soft dew falling I hear it calling—
 Calling and tinkling the night along.

In through the window a moonbeam comes—
 Little gold moonbeam with misty wings;
 All silently creeping, it asks, "Is he sleeping—
 Sleeping and dreaming while mother sings?"

Up from the sea there floats the sob
 Of the waves that are breaking upon the shore,
 As though they were groaning in anguish and moaning—
 Bemoaning the ship that shall come no more.

But sleep, little pigeon, and fold your wings—
 Little blue pigeon with mournful eyes;
 Am I not singing—see, I am swinging—
 Swinging the nest where my darling lies.

Pears' Soap

HENRY WARD BEECHER WRITES:

Henry Ward Beecher

"If CLEANLINESS is next to GODLINESS, soap must be considered as a means of GRACE, and a clergyman who recommends MORAL things should be willing to recommend soap. I am told that my commendation of PEARS' Soap has opened for it a large sale in the UNITED STATES. I am willing to stand by every word in favor of it I ever uttered. A man must be fastidious indeed who is not satisfied with it."

PEARS' is the best, the most elegant and the most economical of all soaps for general TOILET PURPOSES. It is not only the most attractive, but the purest and cleanest. It is used and recommended by thousands of intelligent mothers throughout the civilized world, because while serving as a detergent and cleanser, its emollient properties prevent the chafing and discomforts to which infants are so liable. It has been established in London 100 years as A COMPLEXION SOAP, has obtained 15 international Awards, and is now sold in every city in the world. It can be had of nearly all Druggists in the United States; but be sure that you get the genuine, as there are worthless imitations.

SODEN MINERAL PASTILLES

PREPARED FROM THE Sanative Salts of the highly renowned Springs of the German Health Resort. SODEN in the TAUNUS, under the supervision and control of W. STOELTZING, M.D., Member of the Royal Board of Health.

They are to be used with great benefit in all

CHRONIC CATARRHS of the THROAT, LARYNX and LUNGS.

By their action the mucus is dissolved, quiet and ease obtained; owing to their rare advantages they alleviate an often very trying cough and then bring about the longed-for recovery. Their influence has been exceedingly beneficial in cases of the different CATARRHS OF CONSUMPTIVES, the CHRONIC CATARRHS of the STOMACH and INTESTINES, CONSTIPATION, HEMORRHOIDS, ENLARGEMENT of the LIVER, and other ABDOMINAL COMPLAINTS requiring a mild, laxative and stimulating treatment.

DIPHTHERIA can be prevented by the use of SODEN MINERAL PASTILLES, as it has been demonstrated that the spores of the disease settle only in throats affected by Catarrh, and the tormenting WHOOPING COUGH is changed to its mildest form.

Singers, Speakers, Preachers, Lawyers, Teachers, and all whose avocation requires continued use of their voice will experience gratifying relief by using these Pastilles.

The most renowned Medical Authorities recommend and prescribe them.

At the International Exhibition at Brussels the SODEN MINERAL PASTILLES were awarded THE HIGHEST DISTINCTION, SILVER MEDAL, by a jury of medical men.

Judge's Novels.

THE LATEST AND BEST WORKS OF FICTION.

No. 1.—"NAPOLEON SMITH." (Fourth edition.) By W. J. ARKELL and A. T. WORDEN. Price, 25 cents.

"Napoleon Smith," a novel by a well known New Yorker, is published by the Judge publishing company. Its first edition of 50,000, which is unparalleled in the publishing trade, is fully warranted by the plot of the story. The author has made quite as much of a hit in popular interest as Rider Haggard ever has done, and there is no one who reads it who will not be so entertained as to ask all his friends to read it. It is remarkably well conceived and is handled with skill.—Boston Globe.

No. 2.—"STAR-CROSSED: The Life and Love of an Actress." By AN ACTRESS. Price, 50 cents.

A remarkably interesting story. Intensely original in style and full of startling incident. The author is a well-known actress of the American stage, and has written the book in a charmingly refreshing, vigorous and entertaining manner.

No. 3.—"LADY CAR: The Sequel of a Life." By MRS. OLIPHANT. Price, 25 cents.

The latest story from the pen of this entertaining writer. The only authorized American edition.

No. 4.—"JACK OF HEARTS: A Story of Bohemia." By H. T. JOHNSON. Price, 25 cents. A delightful romance of English life.

Jew and Gentile

A COMMENTARY ON

"The Original Mr. Jacobs" and "The American Jew."

By JOHANNA von BOHNE.

PREFACE.

This pamphlet deals with a simple record of fact, such as I have gathered through a life-long social intercourse with numerous Hebrew families, at whose hands I have enjoyed many kindnesses since my early orphanage; and being a lady of good family, belonging to the Protestant faith, not afraid to reveal my name and antecedents, it cannot be inferred that my object in writing these impartial lines is traceable to any motive beyond a feeling of justice and a desire to contradict the falsehoods and express my disapproval of the unknown writers who promulgated these untruths in such malicious and indecent language that it must disgust every right-thinking person, be he Jew or Gentile.
