9/20/2001 16:33	Comments	I was introduced to Herbert Marcuse and the Frankfurt School as an undergraduate philosophy student at Fordham University. Marcuse and Adorno, and, to a lesser extent Habermas, transformed my philosophical outlook. Inspired by these thinkers I went on to complete my Ph.D. in philosophy at the Graduate Faculty Philosophy Dept, New School for Social Research. I am now introducing another generation of college students to Marcuse and the Critical Theorists

9/26/2001 21:29	Comments	I have been meaning to read "One-Dimensional Man" for several years and an finally plowing through it. I am about three quarters of the way through and have found about 15 percent of it to be profound (which makes it well worth reading), about 65 percent possibly profound but requiring further reflection, and the remaining 20 percent incomprehensible. Not incomprehensible because I don't have the intellect to understand it. Incomprehensible because of the poor writing. This man was seriously in need of an editor. I would love to obtain the e-mail address of some Marcuse scholars with whom I could exchange some questions and observations when I complete this book. If anyone is game, please drop me a line at 10/17/2001 8:32	Comments	I'm reading One dimensional man, and for the part I have read I found it amazing and very profound. For example I think that the chapters about the language of "total administration" and the critic of empirism are absolutely delightful. I wonder about the fact it was write in the 60's and it is maybe more actual than never. One may think it belong more specifically to the cold-war era, but the facts of everyday show that that only the "enemies" are changed, but not the state of ultimate danger that post-industrial society need to work at best. It is simply enlightening to analize how world work with the struments this book offer. It can't pass a day without seeing that even the foolish things can become rational in a world that is irrational. This book stand in front of us, in front of our optimism and faith, always keeping us in guard about the immutable character of this society

11/4/2001 12:39	Comments	Reading Marcuse's "An Essay on Liberation" changed my worldview profoundly, and I hope to find the time one day to read some of his other works. I found 'Essay' to be a great introduction to leftist thought for me personally, as it open my mind to other great thinkers such as Chomsky and Marx, as well as such paradigms as post-modernism.

1/31/2002 3:19	Comments	Concerning the question about the ashes of philosopher, I would listen to Marcuse's wishes and please to move his ashes, where he wanted that they should be. Torrey Pines near San Diego and Pontresina in Switzerland were mentioned. Didn't the great philosopher moved to Switzerland,

		Herbert Marcuse's ashes:
		I think Herbert Marcuse is mostly famous for his books in English which were written in the USA. So, I think Germany is out.
		Torrey Pines near San Diego sounds like the best option. If he was happy there, then it seems like a good and peaceful resting place.
		On the other hand (philosophically), in his own spirit, it would be better to be in Berlin as a constant reminder of what happen there and what was Marcuse's response to the spirit of his times.
		Herbert Marcuse as a student spent some time with Edmund Husserl and from 1928 until 1932 he attended a number of courses with Martin Heidegger, but I think it is clear that G.W.F. Hegel was the greatest influence on his thinking and direction. No Karl Marx without Hegel, it in the same way no Marcuse without Hegel. I see Marcuse as closer to Hegel than Marx.
		Herbert Marcuse was a thinker and philosopher - he was not a political economist, or a left-wing journalist (tendencies in Marx). Hegel said that in philosophy there are neither predecessors nor successors. So, Marcuse is more than just a left-wing Hegelian or just some modern follower of Hegel. But his critical debate is with Hegel. That is why, I think Herbert Marcuse would be better in Berlin with Hegel.
		If you see Herbert Marcuse as wanting to rest peacefully for eternity in Torres Pines that is one vision. But if you see him in a critical debate with his times and philosophical with great

He spent his most formative years in Germany, which decisively influenced his philosophy, the values he stood for and espoused to the end of his live. In an interview, which is included in the documentary "Herbert"s Hippopotamus" by Juutilainen Marcuse compares California with its sunshine and warm weather to Europe which he describes as grey, and blunt, and real. He clearly deserves a place in the company of Brecht and Hegel.

		I would like to respond to your request regarding the ashes of Herbert Marcuse. Perhaps my suggestion is unusual but I think that the ashes should be deposited at all three sites. I personally know the Torrey Pines Park, near UCSD, and I think this beautiful place where one has a view on the Pacific Ocean would be appropriate. It is also nearby where Herbert Marcuse taught. I do not know Pontresina, but if Herbert Marcuse liked it there, he should rest there as well. And finally, yes, he should be at the cemetery where Hegel's and Brecht's graves are because your grandfather is a great philosopher! I can understand the hesitation regarding Germany, nevertheless he represents the "other" Germany, das Land der Dichter und Denker! Sincerely, Jürgen Kleist asking people to comment here.) Basically, I think "the Germans" have come a long wayin a positive sensefrom when they drove Herbert and the rest of their unwanted citizens from their country in the 1930s and 40s. (When Herbert died in 1979, they had not yet come nearly as farthis is what my own research as a historian is about, so I think I can speak with authority on that.) In fact, Herbert died during an extended, invited sojourn in Germany, during which he was repeatedly honored, for instance with a standing ovation at the Frankfurt Roemerberg Discussions.

		Thus I'd say it is a time for healing and making whole again. Herbert, Angela Davis, Erica Sherover (his third wife), all went (back) to Germany to study and teach. At that time no lasting bridges were built; Germany was not ready. But now I think the country is. And I think Herbert would be honored to be next to Hegel and Brecht, as opposed to in perpetual exile in California.
		So my vote is for Berlin—presuming, of course, that they do want him there!

He supported an extreme ideology that, simply put, promoted his own thought, and wished to stiffle any an all opposition. Read on: In their recent book, The Shadow University: The Betrayal of Liberty on America\'s Campuses, Professor Alan Charles Kors of the University of Pennsylvania and civil liberties attorney Harvey A. Silverglate trace the recent phenomenon of campus speech codes to 1960s Marxist philosopher Herbert Marcuse. In "Repressive Tolerance," a 1965 essay, Marcuse wrote that free expression is actually "repressive." By his logic, the powerful and wealthy elite keeps the great bulk of the population "manipulated and indoctrinated" so that they "parrot, as their own, the opinion of their masters." In this environment, tolerance of all views serves to entrench the status quo power structure. "Liberating tolerance," Marcuse wrote, would consist of "intolerance against movements from the Right, and toleration of movements from the Left." Assailing the "sacred liberalistic principle of equality for `the other side," Marcuse advocated "the withdrawal of toleration of speech and assembly from groups and movements which promote aggressive policies, armament, chauvinism, discrimination on the grounds of race and religion, or which oppose the extension of public services, social security, medical care, etc." After all, Marcuse opined, "there are issues where there is no `other side\' in any more than a formalistic sense." Kors and Silvergate observe that while Marcusian logic has been rejected by the "real world," it has enveloped the academy. They point to the rise of speech codes on campus. But Marcuse\'s ideas are even more pervasive in universities: Marcusian logic has invaded the curricula and educational programs of American universities. This is scary. Thank God he didn't have the power to enforce his views on the rest of us. Funny, at the very end of one-dimensional man, herbert cited walter benjamin both in german and

Nur um der Hoffnungslosen willen ist uns die Hoffnung gegeben

It is only for those without hope that hope is given to us

This somehow for me sums up his own work: the negativity of bourgeoise society that produces hopelesness within the existing totality, but nevertheless optimism that one can transcend and sublate the existing false totality as well as hope for fundamental social change that can result in a better, free society.

the german marxist philosopher ernst bloch wrote that hope should be \"tätige hoffnung\" (active hope) in order to change society for the better.

herbert marcuse\'s life was active hope as shown by his political engagement and his search for a concrete philosophy that wanted to contribute to the liberation of man.

maybe one could write on the gravestone besides a biographical note this quotation from benjamin for it reflects the dialectic of negativity/hopelesness and active hope for a better society that guided herbert\'s thinking and acting.

another idea would be a short quotation from one of herbert\'s favourite poems or lyrical works that also stands metaphorically for his life, achievements and works.

There was a television documentary on the BBC last night (24/03/02), part of a series entitled \'Century of the Self\', which sought to expose the use of Freudian psychoanalysis (promoted, it must be said, by Freud\'s relatives) by the state and corporations to control our drives and manipulate our desires. Marcuse featured in this documentary: some old footage from the 1960s in which he outlined his theories about the dark underside of \'progress\', wealth and technology. We don't often see this kind of thing on the TV, and I found it wonderfully refreshing, even though Marcuse\'s most famous book is now almost forty years old.

I first read One-Dimensional Man a couple of years ago as an undergraduate. It was still relevant then, and is more so now. \'War\' against \'Terror\' in order for peace, justice and the defense of \'freedom\'? (Freedom for whom to do what?) Shop for victory? The madness caries on, Leviathan-like, a typhoon out of control, even of its own master: \'The magus who can no longer control his spells.\' Built-in obsolesence has reached such wasteful and truly staggering proportions. You know, if you don\'t use your \'new-look\' VW Beetle everyday, it commits suicide? (See Michael Moore\'s book Stupid White Men).

But while Marcuse\'s work is a powerful contribution in the fight against organised robbery and the control of humans, I have to disagree with his acceptance of the need for violence as a tool of social transformation. I am not a pacifist, and feel that, where necessary, the use of violence may have to be resorted to, for example against dictatorships and barbaric regimes. Fortunately however, even in our democratic unfreedom we have a tool we can use to get them out: the vote. In the most dark situations, there is still a glimmer of hope. This does not mean Conservative or Labour, Republican or Democrat--the usual non-choice--but it means we have a chance to forge something novel. The very thing, democracy, which is used to give us false freedom, can actually be used to create a genuine freedom.

We can, by acting together, begin a new and free society, one in which we can at least lay the England

		Pero creo que he dado un paso más, modestamente,ES POSIBLE TENDER UN PUENTE SOBRE EL ABISMO ENTRE EL PRESENTE Y SU FUTUROS. QUE LOS EXTREMOS HISTORICOS SE ENCUENTREN OTRA VEZ: LA CONCIENCIA MAS AVANZADA DE LA HUMANIDAD Y LA FUERZA MAS EXPLOTADA.
		Se puede analizar a partir del trabajo en Comunidad Terapéutica, creo que es una pista Lamento haber escrito en español, ojala me entiendan y si pueden comuniquense [MACHINE TRANSLATION FROM SPANISH: I was deeply influenced by the thought of H. Marcuse.
		An acute thinker, according to my point of view only surpassed by Marx and Freud, and comparable to J. Lacan, Althousser, A. Gorz, Trostky The prologue of the Unidimensional H. touches me every time I read it to the marrow I am distressed, but I am still struggling I live in a Latin American country, with a brutal and ruthless crisis, that puts more strongly on life the option: Socialism or barbarism. "It is necessary to awaken and organize solidarity as a biological necessity to stand united against inhuman brutality and exploitation." This is the task The justification of intellectual work lies in this task, and today the work Intellectual needs to be justified. "For me these words have more meaning today, if possible than when they were written.
		But I think I have taken a step, modestly, IT IS POSSIBLE TO TEND A BRIDGE ON THE ABYSS BETWEEN THE PRESENT AND ITS FUTURE. THAT HISTORICAL EXTREMES WILL BE FOUND AGAIN:
		THE MOST ADVANCED CONSCIOUSNESS OF HUMANITY AND THE MOST EXPLOITED FORCE. It can _	be analyzed from the work in Therapeutic Community, I think it is a clue

		"Under the rule of a repressive whole, liberty can be made into a powerful instrument of domination. Free election of masters does not ablish the masters or the slaves. Free choice among a wide variety of goods and services does not signify freedom if these goods and services

12/12/2002 8:13	Comments	I'm a student in history and philosophy. I'm planning on writing my history thesis about Marcuse Marcuse's thought will be the focal point for my investigations. Although I'm touched by his 'timeless' engagement the philosophical project of Marcuse has become really problematic in ou times. In short, we've reached a 'point of no revolution'. I'm trying to grasp the importance of Marcuse's thought in the context of our present, with all it's pro's and con's. Great site, to be for 1/3/2003 17:33	Comments	When I read One-Dimensional Man it changed the course of my academic life forever. I am indebted to Marcuse for ideas I shall never tire of exploring and analyses so penetratingly deep that their implications will be felt for at least a century after they were written. Two chapters of my dissertation cover the ideas of technological rationality and total administration. The film link (Herbert's Hippos) on the site allowed me to hear a thinker in his own words, even if only in a few key areas. Thanks so much for maintaining this site!! humbly, _, .,		international communism and international politics. thus your date of his having come to brandeis in 1958 is mistaken. he greatly influenced my thinking and still does except that i was greatly dissapointed when in 1956 he expressed serious reservations about the hungarian 2/14/2003 16:04		Professor Laurin Raiken, Chair, Interdiscilinary Arts Program, Gallatin School of Individualized Study, New York university I am deeply moved to come upon the Herber Marcuse homepage the night before the worldwide demonstration against the planned war against Iraq. I am very grateful to all of you who put this homepage together and maintain it in such a useful and beautiful manner. I was a student of Herbert Marcuse, as an undergraduate at Brandeis University from 1961 to 1965. Along with my mentor in the arts, Leo Bronstein, Herbert was one of the greatest minds, teachers and human beings I have ever known. I have used Herbert's books and ideas in my teaching at New York University for almost 32 years. He remains one of the most important and influential philosphers of Western 'civilization." Herbert's work and spirit is relevant to almost every circumstance we confront. I remember Kurt H. Wolff's words at a memorial service fro Herbert at the meeting of the American Sociological Society just after Herbert's death, "We need you now more than you need us." This is just as tru now as it was then. 8/3/2003 21:59	Comments	Richard Popkin was the chair of the philosophy department at UCSD from 1963 to 1968 and took the initiative, with Avrum Stroll, to invite Herbert Marcuse, Stanley Moore, Lewis Feuer and Joseph Tussman to speak at a symposium on Marxism. This led to Marcuse's being invited to become a member of the philosophy department in 1965. Marcuse was delighted with the intellectual and natural environment in La Jolla. The philosophy department that Popkin envisaged was far more diverse than other American departments at that time. We have many memories of Marcuse and some correspondence from our interactions with Herbert, his second wife Inge and his third wife Frica Sherover Revolution and Revolt. It's disturbing how right on so much of what Prof. Marcuse says is today, 40 years after the fact. I find it equally disturbing how he reveals to me how little confidence I personally have in others. His work, despite its condemnations, exudes a genuine confidence and faith in the potential of all people (or virtually all). I wish that I could find that faith.

1/4/2004 20:54	Comments	I agree with many of Marcuse observations, but not conclusions. Yes, the people of world is much too materialistic and we are not as free as we think we are. But his cure is worse than disease.
		Marcuse wanted totalitarian dictatorship, where people are expressly forbidden to think for themselves. At least with Capitalism, no one points gun to head and say "OBEY!" Marxism is not answer. If you want know more about propoganda and brainwashing, read John Taylor Gatto "Dumbing Us Down". It helps to know English. Gatto and Ayn Rand were much better it is good to see/hear so many international voices in this guest book, i hope Marcuse will inspire you to RESIST oppression wherever you find it. i am committed to finding alternatives to capitalism and ways of establishing a communal fulfiling society.

		i welcome e-mail from anyone interested in establishing international communication regarding been a T.A. of Marcuse at UC San Diego. Herbert came to speak at UNM and gave a wonderfully enthusiastic lecture at a time when all Marxist professors on campus (all three, I believe) were being denied tenure. We leftists always felt, and indeed were, under a kind of revanchist seige in the land of the Atomic bomb. Therefore, for the small left in Albuquerque it was highly elevating to our morale to be in the presence of this great philosopher. A girlfriend of mine actually drove Herbert from the airport to the campus, which, I suppose is more or less equivalent to saying of a person around 30 A.D., that he knew the person who lent Jesus a donkey for his ride into 5/1/2005 5:16	Comments	Hi Charles!!!! Thanks for your interest in my MARCUSE books. Did you get the last one (vol 4.

		Marcuse und die Studentenbewegung)? We had some good reviews here and it was 5th ranking in so-called "bestenlist". Big surprise! I am just preparung the next one "Philosophie und Gesellschaftskritik". Fantastic articles from the early 30ies. I found the first draft from Marcuse for the book "Autorität und Familie" which appeared in 1936. His draft was written in Geneve and is from July 1933! The book will have very interesting articles discussiong philosophical issues.
		/About Jaspers, Positivism, German Philosophy from the 20ies to the 30ties/ But the most intersting ones are threee lectures which Marcuse delivered in the late 30ies, early 40ties in New York. Exciting. Hope the book will be out in Spring 2006. Charles, maybe I can make it to Philadelphia in November. Any chance to meet you there? BestWhat an interesting job! I am

I have done my master and doctor degree on Herbert Marcuse's theory here in Brazil. In that moment there were a few who were interested in Marcuse's theory, certainly there were (and there are) many more intereseted in Benjamin, Adorno and Habermas. Now I'm Professor at Universidade Estadual de Maringá (State University of Maringa, Paraná) and at Pos-graduation in Universidade Estadual de São Paulo (state University of São Paulo) at Marilia Campus teaching Marcuse's theory. I'm very well suprised that a new generation here in Brazil shows its interestings in Marcuse's theory and I'm trying to contributing to his. On the events I have participating I have develoered address on Marcuse's theory. Events such as Coloquio Internacional de Teoria Critica e Educação (2004, Piracicaba), XI Encontro Nacional de Filosofia da ANPOF (2004, Salvador), Congresso Internacional Dimensão Estética. Em Homenagem aos 50 anos de Eros e Civilização (2005, Belo Horizonte), III Colóquio Nacional de Filosofia da História: Pensamento e Ação (2005, Aracaju), XXVIII Jornada de Filosofia e Teoria das Ciências humanas -Teoria crítica, Política e Educação (2005, Marília). I've done translations into portuguese, published in Cultura e Sociedade and A Grande Recusa Hoje. Now I'm translating Freedom and historical Impratives and Essay non Liberation. On the many events I have met Douglas Kellner, Jeremy Shapiro, Shierry Nichoelsen, Ilan Gur Ze'ev and others. I hope someday go to USA and Germany. But til then I'll still working on Marcuse's theory because I'm still hearing people saying that he was neglected on the past and now are so uptodate.

		existentialism in a critique of capitalism and Soviet communism. His "One - Dimensional Man" precisely delineates the intellectual stultification in "advanced industrial society," which is even more pronounced in the present era of globalization and post - Soviet communism.

10/23/2006 23:44	Comments	I'm always curious who the haters are and how much they know about Herbert's work. What do they come across that they take the time to look him up and leave their mark in this guest book? Regarding the previous entry, I found the press release below on the Univ. of Alabama, Huntsville website: "Crowson, '88, named director of NEAR/SBDC (8/1/2006) Larry Crowson, '88 B.S.B.A., MIS, is taking his show on the road. The new director of the Northeast Alabama Regional Small Business Development Center says one of his priorities will be scheduling more activities throughout the center's seven-county service area. "We're supposed to be out in the counties and we will be again," he said recently. "We have a whole slate of seminars planned for 2007 throughout that seven-county area. That is something we're going to be taking much more seriously." That outreach is already underway: A series of small business SBA loan clinics in July and August will reach beyond Huntsville to Decatur, Guntersville, Scottsboro, Fort Payne and perhaps Cullman. A Huntsville native returning after a 15-year absence, Crowson also wants to expand the SBDC's clientele. "I think the perception has been that the SBDC was here primarily for startup businesses," he said. "There is a group of larger businesses that are on the cusp of making it to the next level.

11/20/2006 20:52	Comments	Your website is great. Marcuse in his old age had been described by some as an enfant terrible, with the suggestion that he was not able to overcome his student revolutionary days, when in fact he developed his thinking during his mature days. I have been re-reading marcuse and I find his ideas as fresh and applicable as before. Reason that perceives and exposes the falsity of the social order (honeyed as it is with technology and advertisements) is of course the seed of true Andrew Feenburg's recent book on the the two thinkers. I was aware that before his reading of Marx's Paris Manuscripts, Marcuse was very much influenced by the the fundamental ontology of 'Being and Time'. For me, Marcuse's essay on the foundations of historical materialism is his key work. In this essay, one can sense Marcuse's intellectual excitement at his discovery of Marx's 'radical ontology'. I would urge anyone looking to engage with Marcuse's work to start with this early essay, as they may find it enriches and deepens their understanding of his major works. I would like to thank Harold Marcuse for this page - Herbert was truly a great thinker and deserves 8/4/2008 10:59	Comments	I've been a big fan of Herbert Marcuse for several years now, ever since discovering his disquieting critique of modern consumerist American society. I have been most influenced by this almost "Matrix"-like ideain conjunction with Mill's "tyranny of the majority" concept, which idea holds that people in our American consumer economy only have the false appearance of real freedomthat we are in fact cleverly manipulated and controlled (mostly by the mass media and advertising) so as to remain a ready market for consumer goods and services, and moreover remain blithely ignorant of our servile status. I was astounded when I first read this (or similar) ideas from Marcuse and understood their implications (but knew immediately that he was right); I didn't think anyone would dare to voice such ideas, so openly, so brazenly. Would that more people knew about Marcuse and his ideasstill so very relevant today

8/26/2008 9:17	Comments	Niklas Carlsson har bott i Umeå i drygt tio år. Förutom att leda arbetet med Kulturnatta är han även musiker, fotograf, ordförande Kontaktnätet Region Norra Norrland (en riksorganisation för ideella kulturföreningar), eldartist, ljudtekniker och kvinnomisshandlare. Hans första kontakt med Umeås kulturliv var när hans band Dark Side Cowboys spelade på gamla Galaxen. Efter att i hemlighet ha misshandlat en i bandet i flera år, samt efter detta misshandlat åtminstonde tre andra tjejer under årens lopp tror Niklas att det fortfarande är okej att visa sig på stadens gator i Umeå. Detta mest för att han är sociopat och inte förstår att han gjort något fel. Nu i maj 2008 arrangerar han Kulturnatta för tredje gången. Har vi tur kanske vi får se han spöa sin nya flickvän direkt på stora scenen!

5/17/2009 18:56	LinkIn	I was in a casual discussion with a friend and heard her use the expression 'one-dimensional' to describe her direct experience with some politicians who are all too often only looking for a quick gain electorally regardless of the broader, long term ramifications, and i thought of dr. marcuse's book by the 'same' name. I then googled his name, and to my pleasant surprise I was immediately connected with this site which I have enjoyed going over.

3/30/2010 18:34	Comments	How anyone could ever be stupid enough to buy into Marcuse's utter bullshit is a complete mystery to me. He was a total fraud from beginning to end. His students left his classes thinking: "What I just heard must be great because I cannot understand any of it." What they did not realize was that everything he said was a complete fabrication designed to produce exactly that effect. The man was the consummate academic charlatan.

		of the Industrial Workers of the World, The Green Party USA, and the Surrealist Movement in the US. I'm on the editorial board of the Green Party magazine "Synthesis/Regeneration" for which I also write and do artwork. One of my recent book reviews was of "The Essential Marcuse" ("Reason for Revolt", S/R 45). I was lucky to come across Marcuse early in the development of my political consciousness in the mid-80's as a result of references to him in books by Abbie Hoffman and Alan Watts. He remains for me an important influence on the development of a Libertarian Socialist political position.

2/21/2012 22:56	Comments	In 1969, I took Marcuse's freshman Philosophy course with my friend Esq. Sidney Glass. I recalled how Herbert paid for the glass door we kicked-in at the UCSD Registrar's Office in the May, 1969 during the Lumumba-Zapapta College protest. Recently, Angela Davis and I spoke fondly about our UCSD days and how we miss Dr. Marcuse [those were some times]. I respected his activism even though I hardly understood his SDS Rim 1 position until we had a long talk and a few beers

		I remember reading about it in one or another essay long ago -60s now where is it?
		Marcuse spoke one time at Epic West a Brecht Center in Berkeley, (1970s) the ironies of course are evident. BB didn't agree with the Tui's in West Germany yet probably would have agreed with Marcuse had he known that Herbert had assisted many of the US New Left and youngsters get on
